Cultural and economic relations between China and India date back to ancient times. The Silk route not only served as a major trade route between India and China, but was also credited with facilitating the spread of Buddhism from India to East Asia. Both countries enjoy similar demographic dividends and have been registering highest economic growth in recent years. In fact, these two economies have become the growth engines for an otherwise stagnant world economy today. India and China have taken the center-stage of global geo-political environment in recent times due to their sustained economic growth rates and achievements in economic development indicators during the last decades. India and China are expected to lead a new economic world order that espouses economic prosperity in a culturally and socially rich environment. In this context, it becomes imperative to examine some of the key indicators of growth such as the Banking, Finance, Economics and Trade. With increasing importance of issues such as transparency, accountability and social responsibility in the new world order, discussions on corporate social responsibility, corporate governance, and sustainability have also gathered momentum. This conference intends to address these issues during the two-day conference.
